Such is the first entry in Minute Book of the Bellefonte and Philipsburg Turnpike Co., which covers a period of 27 years. In all that time the record of the proceedings was faithfully kept, and is a matter of conciseness as well as of interest. The old book is in the possession of a great grandson of the Presidents to whose courtesy we are indebted for privilege of examining it.

Some few extracts from its pages may be of interest to our readers as many of them are descendants of the men who organized the corporation or were part of its management in the years of its existence.

At the next meeting Sept. 6th the Treasurer was authorized "to receive in payment of stock the notes of Centre, Huntingdon and Meadville Banks or specie." This was in the days of State Bank when if you were caught out of your county with a roll of notes, you might pay for your lodging with them if the landlord did not discover before morning that the bank was "broke." Nov. 26 the Board resolved "that Meadville paper would not be accepted in payment of stock."

April 4th 1820 an order was drawn in favor of Wm Brindle for $5.20 for printing notices. Brindle was the editor and proprietor of the Bellefonte Patriot, the first paper published in the town of which the Bellefonte Republican is a descendent.

At the election of officers and managers Sept. 4th 1820 a new set of names figure in the directorate Jno. Morris, Jos. M. Fox, Wm. M. Patton, Daniel Dobbins, Edward Purdue, Jas. Rothrock, Thomas Hastings, Geo. Williams and Robert Hays are the new men. Sept. 15th the Board met and proceeded with John Mitchell (its surveyor) "to view and level the proposed road over the Muncy Mountain through Purdue's Gap and on that and the succeeding day they leveled over the said mountain at 4 per cent and struck the Bald Eagle creek above the middle of DeWitts Run" Oct. 20 The yeas and Nays was ordered taken on the two contemplated routes for the Turnpike road. For the mountain route there were Benner, Humes and Purdue, for the valley (via Milesburg) Blanchard, Dobbins, Williams, Hays, Fox, Norris, Potter, Hastings. In Feby 1821 they resolved not to receive the notes of Huntingdon in payment of stock.

Among the names of the contractors we find, Jno. Keller, Wm. Belford, John and Peter McGovern and "Young Hinton." "Young" Hinton was A. C. Hinton of Snow Shoe; John and Peter McGovern were afterwards celebrated railroad contractors as their descendants are today. June 20, 1822, the committee appointed to select sites for toll gates reported "but two necessary at this time. One to be fixed at Bellews (Boileau's this should be the writer believes) and the other Fishers, at neither of which place would it be necessary to erect a house. Mr. Curtin having agreed to lease his house in the narrows for a toll house and Will Fisher to keep the gate at his house. Mrs. Bellews was appointed to keep the house at the narrows." The old house at the narrows is still standing on the east side of the pike, at least it was some few years ago.

We find that in 1826 Benj. Bennett, famous as mine host of the old time where stands the present Garman House and Hays both members of the Board of Managers operated a stage team between Bellefonte and Philipsburg. William Tonner was given "credit on account of his stock for making and putting up milestones."

Query—What has become of all those old milestones?

A curious thing is the "Statement of the affairs of the Bellefonte and Philipsburg Turnpike Road Company exhibiting the receipts and payments of the company from the 5th day of December 1825 to the 11th day of December 1826."

Cost of making road including toll houses per former reports	$22,563.35½
Stock paid by the state	$19,473.00
Stock paid by individual subscribers	$4634.39

In 1828 Franklin B. Smith was elected Secretary. Smith was with the single exception of John Tonner the finest penman of his day. In fact he and Tonner have left records in our county Dockets which never have been equalled and it is not likely now that they ever will. Thomas Burnside was regularly elected president from 1819 up until 1846. Hamilton Humes succeeded Burnside. The meetings of the corporation were held at various places, the house of Evan Miles, Inn-keeper, on the National Bank corner, Judge Burnside's office, Sam'l Lipton's house in Milesburg. In 1829 Andrew Gregg Jr. resigned as Treasurer "on account of his removal to Pennsvalley."

The old book is full of matters of local historical interests placed there in a concise and simple form by the great business men of the early days of the county.

A GREAT GAME.

State Wins from Watsontown, Score 6 to 0.

One of the largest crowds that has attended a base ball game in Bellefonte for some time gathered at Meadowbrooke Park (Glass Works meadow) to witness the game between the famous State College team and Watsontown Friday afternoon. The fact that State has defeated Princeton and West Point and that the game was for the benefit of the Bellefonte Hospital was instrumental in drawing the big crowd, it being estimated that over 1000 people were present when the game was called, It is said that over $100 was cleared for the hospital.

Quigley pitched a fine game for State and succeeded in keeping the visitors down to a few scattering hits.

Very few Watsontown men reached first base, Quigley's support was faultless.

The visitors also put up a good class of ball. Hafer pitched a very clever game for Watsontown striking out many of State's heavy batters.

The Coleville Band gave a very creditable concert and added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion.

The score was as follows:

Posing For Lewd Photographs.

Kate Confer of Youngsdale and Carrie Wagner of Bellefonte, who have been residing in Williamsport for some time, says the Sun, were arrested Thursday evening on a charge of posing for immoral pictures which Frank Wright was selling throughout Lycoming and adjoining counties. Friday morning they were taken before Alderman Batzle, where they pleaded guilty to the charge and in default of bail were sent to jail for trial at court. Wright was also arrested Thursday evening on a warrant from Sunbury. He was taken to that place, where he waived a hearing and gave bail for court.

DEMOCRACY'S POW WOW!

They Met on Tuesday and Named Their Ticket.

E. L. ORVIS FOR JUDGE

Jake Swire's Pole Not Long Enough to Knock Legislative Persimmon and Noll and Kepler Were Named—Kimport for Prothonotary.

THE OTHER NOMINATIONS MADE

For a Presidential year the Democratic county convention Tuesday was a rather tame affair and had it not been for the three cornered legislative fight the democratic masses would have displayed very little interest in the otherwise cut and dried program of the leaders. The clans were very slow in gathering and it was nearly half past twelve when County Chairman Hugh S. Taylor called the convention to order.

The first thing on the program was the reading of the call for the convention by one of the secretaries of the County Committee, J Kennedy Johnston of Bellefonte. Then followed the roll call of delegates and there were few absentees.

Col. J. L. Spangler of Bellefonte, was then chosen Permanent Chairman of the convention, and a good selection he was, too, for his witty tongue, helped to enliven, what was otherwise a dull and commonplace convention. George R. Meek and Charles R. Kurtz, of Bellefonte, were elected secretaries, and Harry F. McManaway, of Miles, and W. T. Kelley, of Bellefonte, tellers. The organization was then completed by the selection of W. F. Smith, of Millheim, as reading clerk.

The order of business was then adopted on the motion of Geo. L. Goodhart, of Potter township.

The chair then appointed the following committee on Resolutions: Dr. F. K. White, of Philipsburg; Capt. W. H. Fry, of Ferguson; L. B. Frank, of Miles; Abram Weber, of Howard; S. A. McQuistion, of Bellefonte; John B. Long, of Rush; M. D. Kelley, of Snow Shoe.

The chair also announced the following committee on credentials: Hammond Seebler, of Bellefonte; George W. Rumberger, of Unionville; J. W. Orrs, of Marion; D. J. Meyer, of Centre Hall; W. A. Murray, of Harris; George L. Goodhart, of Potter; J. D. Miller, of Walker.

J. Calvin Meyer Esq., of Bellefonte in an excellent speech (what a pity it was wasted on such a lost cause) placed in nomination for the office of President Judge Ellis L. Orvis, of Bellefonte. It was seconded by John Keichline, of Bellefonte. No other nominations were made and the result was Orvis was named by acclamation.

At this point, although it was clearly out of order, the chairman called for the report of the committee on resolutions in spite of the fact that they had been out about three minutes preparing 'steen pages of typewritten manuscript attacking the State and National administrations The resolutions were read by Dr. White, the chairman, and the only new thing in them was a highly laudatory commendation of the candidacy of Ellis L. Orvis for Judge. They seemed determined to give "the son of his father" as big a boost as possible.

The only excitement of the day was the contest for the legislative nominations. The slated candidates were Noll and Kepler, but Philipsburg headed by Cine Hoffer and Doc White tried to kick over the traces but it was of no avail. Their candidate Jacob Swires was left at the pole. The candidates were placed in nomination as follows: John Keichline, of Bellefonte, named John Noll of Bellefonte; Sol Schmidt, of Philipsburg, named his fellow townsman, Jacob F. Swires and Doc White in a faint voice placed before the convention the name of J. Will Kepler, of Ferguson township. The first ballot put Kepler, out of the woods and on the second John Noll captured the plum. The vote was as follows:

	1st	2nd
Kepler	81
Noll	55	48½
Swires	40	38½

John F. Potter of Boggs twp., had 5 votes instructed for him but knowing he had no earthly show for success very discreetly withdrew his name before the balloting commenced.

The balance of the convention's work was dead easy, Arthur Kimport, of Harris, was named by acclamation for Prothonotary. In a like manner William G. Runkle, of Bellefonte was selected for District Attorney.

J. Henry Wetzel, of Bellefonte, was the slated candidate for County Surveyor but our genial friend from Unionville, George Washington Rumberger, thinking things were going entirely to tame nominated S. K. Emerick, of Union township. Wetzel was nominated on the 1st ballot the vote being 38 to 22.

Dr. White offered a resolution naming N. B. Spangler, Edward Jones, W. G. Morrison as congressional conferees in the 21st district and instructed them for George Dimeling, of Clearfield, for congress.

Capt. Hugh S. Taylor was re-elected County Chairman for 1905.

Speeches were made by Col. Spangler and Col. John A. Woodward after which convention adjourned sine die.

THE BELLEFONTE FURNACE

Has Closed Down For Repairs--Nittany Furnace to Also Close.

On Friday morning at 8 o'clock the last iron was taken from Bellefonte Furnace on its second blast. This was the closing of a continuous run of the furnace covering a period of three years and eight months. The fires on this blast were lighted by Miss Sarah Hasting September 27th 1900 and the furnace has continued to make iron ever since and has averaged an output of somewhere between 2200 tons in the lowest month and 3700 tons in the highest month. The total output during the blast was 130000 tons. When started the furnace inwalls of firebrick were three feet in diameter and these are now worn down in the lower part of the furnace, (or bosh,) to 6 to 9 inches. This makes the diameter at this point now about 22 feet instead of 17 feet, the original line of the furnace. The time had arrived when re-lining became absolutely necessary and there was a contingency for a number of months past that the furnace might have to stop at any time for this purpose. The effort; however, on the part of the management was to avoid doing this work in winter and also to postpone it to such time as it might be done when there was a less active demand for pig iron and prices not so remunerative.

Just now furnaces generally are closing down because of the dull condition of the market and the Bellefonte Company are taking advantage of this to make repairs which would have been necessary in almost any event. The record of this blast is the longest continuous one of any Bellefonte furnace it is believed. In order to recover in part the shutdown at Bellefonte Furnace, the Nittany Furnace is now being run on Bellefonte ore mixture, and will complete most of the unfilled orders on the books. Both furnaces, however, have been refusing to take orders for several months with the intention of closing down for from two to three months during the dull period this summer so as to avoid competing at the very lowest prices during the summer season, which is the dull period in the iron trade.

The expectation of the management is that Bellefonte Furnace will be down for repairs and market conditions about three months; that the Nittany furnace will continue in blast until about July 10th and then will also close down for at least two months. The present expectation, however, is that both furnaces will resume under improved market conditions and with an ability to produce iron at a considerably lower cost and so meet the probable market price, sometime between September 1st and October 1st.

The ore banks of both properties are still running and are likely to be in operation until about July 1st. The mines will then probably close down for a month or six weeks, but will start in ample time to stock up the furnaces.

The above facts are given us officially by the management of both furnaces in order that there should be no misapprehension in giving out a statement to the press. That the policy pursued by our local furnaces is one generally adopted by the furnacemen will be seen when we make the statement that at present in the Central Pennsylvania district the following furnaces are out of blast: One at Everett, one at Riddlesburg, two at Saxton and one at Punxsutawney. It is likely that one or two others are likely to go out soon, and that in our Central Pennsylvania district not over two or three furnaces will be in blast this summer out of at least ten in the district.

New Teachers at the Academy.

Two extra teachers will be added to the faculty of the Academy for the coming year, making a corps of twelve instructors for that progressive institution.

Mr. L. B. Hindman, who has been conducting in an interesting manner the Bible study in the boarding department during the past year, will deliver during the ensuing year a series of lectures on Bible truth to the entire school. These lectures will occupy one period of every Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Rebecca Lyon, a pupil of Professor Philip Scharwenka, of Berlin, Germany, the celebrated Polish composer and teacher, and a student under the leading artist of America will establish a department in music. She will employ the mason system of technique in general, and for very young pupils, will adopt the Kindergarten method. The music room at the Academy which has been fitted up so attractively this year and equipped with a new piano, will be Miss Lyon's studio.

The Academy is to be congratulated for laying a needed stress on Bible study and offering to the town rare musical advantages.

BURGLAR AT JULIAN.

Thief Receives a Gun Shot Wound at Hand of J. Howard Turner.

Quite a daring attempt at robbery was frustrated Thursday night between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock when J. Howard Turner, the proprietor of the general store at Julian, Centre county, fired a load from a shot gun through the window at a burglar who was in the act of pilfering his store. The shot took effect and the burglar's nefarious career was suddenly stopped for the time being.

Mr. Turner owns and conducts the large general store at Julian formerly owned by Daniel Irvin and Thursday night he closed up about nine o'clock and went to his home nearby to retire. About 11 o'clock a man named Hoover who was setting up with the venerable Daniel Irvin, who was quite ill at his residence near the store, noticed a light moving about in the store, suspecting that there might be something wrong he hunted up Mr. Turner and together they went to the clerk's house to be sure it was not he, and securing a shot gun, with the clerk, the three returned to the store. Going to the rear of the building Mr Turner caught a glimpse of the burglar coming down a pair of steps and carrying a lamp used in the store. Pointing his gun through the window, the pane of which had been neatly cut out by the burglar in gaining entrance, Mr. Turner fired Instantly the light went out. Mr. Turner did know whether he had hit his man or not, but they could hear no sound and not daring to venture in they kept a guard around the place until daylight when they saw the man lying on the floor face downward.

The thief was a little fellow not much over 5 feet tall and probably about 25 or 30 years of age He had a smooth face, straight dark hair, grey eyes and was dressed in a pepper and salt suit a little the worse for wear.

His unconsciousness was all a sham but it did not deceive Mr. Turner, who roiled him over and searched him. He was armed to the teeth as two revolvers, one 38 calibre and the other 32 calibre were taken from him. The 38 was empty but the 32 was loaded. The man's face was covered with blood from an ugly wound near the right eye, the result of the shot fired by Turner, it first having struck a scale and then inflicted a glancing wound on the burglar.

The blood was washed from the burglar's face and medical attendance summoned. It was found the wound was not a serious one.

The man was turned over to Constable Calvin Holt and W. S Talhelm of Julian who brought him to Bellefonte Friday morning.

He was taken before Squire Keichline who committed him to jail without a hearing he pleading guilty to burglary.

He refused to talk until just before the train left Julian for Bellefonte when he remarked to Turner "that he was a pretty poor marksman." He gave his name as George Henderson and his residence as Colorado. He was searching the store evidently for money and rummaged through several draws and boxes.

The fellow is a harmless looking individual and does not bear the marks of a professional thief. He claims he was penniless and hoped to make a stake and that this was his first attempt at burglary.

CONTINUED.

There was no more cotillon that night. They put him down at last, and in half a dozen sentences Wilbur told them of how he had been shanghaied—told them of Magdalena bay, his fortune in the ambergris and the fight with the beachcombers.

"You people are going down there for target practice, aren't you?" he said, turning to one of the Monterey's officers in the crowd about him. "Yes? Well, you'll find the coolies there, on the beach, waiting for you. All but one," he added grimly.

"We marooned six of them, but the seventh didn't need to be marooned. They tried to plunder us of our boat, but, by —, we made it interesting for 'em!"

"I say, steady, old man!" exclaimed Nat Ridgeway, glancing nervously toward the girls in the surrounding group. "This isn't Magdalena bay, you know."

And for the first time Wilbur felt a genuine pang of disappointment and regret as he realized that it was not.

Half an hour later Ridgeway drew him aside. "I say, Ross, let's get out of here. You can't stand here talking all night. Jerry and you and I will go up to my rooms, and we can talk there in peace. I'll order up three quarts of fizz, and"—

"Oh, rot your fizz!" declared Wilbur. "If you love me, give me Christian tobacco."

As they were going out of the ballroom Wilbur caught sight of Josie Herrick, and, breaking away from the others, ran over to her.

"Oh!" she cried, breathless. "To think, and to think of your coming back after all! No, I don't realize it—I can't. It will take me until morning to find out that you've really come back. I just know now that I'm happier than I ever was in my life before. Oh!" she cried, "do I need to tell you how glad I am? It's just too splendid for words! Do you know, I was thought to be the last person you had ever spoken to while alive, and the reporters and all—oh, but we must have such a talk when all are quiet again! And our dance—we've never had our dance. I've got your card yet. Remember the one you wrote for me at the tea? A facsimile of it was published in all the papers. You are going to be a hero when you get back to San Francisco. Oh, Ross, Ross!" she cried, the tears starting to her eyes. "You've really come back, and you are just as glad as I am, aren't you—glad that you've come back—come back to me?"

Later on, in Ridgeway's room, Wilbur told his story again more in detail to Ridgeway and Jerry. All but one portion of it. He could not make up his mind to speak to them—these society fellows, clubmen and city bred—of Moran. How he was going to order his life henceforward—his life, that he felt to be void of interest without her—he did not know. That was a question for later consideration.

"We'll give another cotillon," exclaimed Ridgeway, "up in the city—give it for you, Ross, and you'll lead. It'll be the event of the season!"

Wilbur uttered an exclamation of contempt. "I've done with that sort of foolery," he answered.

"Nonsense! Why, think, we'll have it in your honor. Every smart girl in town will come, and you'll be the lion of"—

"You don't seem to understand!" cried Wilbur impatiently. "Do you think there's any fun in that for me now? Why, man, I've fought—fought with a naked dirk, fought with a coolie who snapped at me like an ape—and you talk to me of dancing and functions and german favors! It wouldn't do some of you people a bit of harm if you were shanghaied yourselves. That sort of life, if it don't do anything else, knocks a big bit of seriousness into you. You fellows make me sick," he went on vehemently. "As though there wasn't anything else to do but lead cotillons and get up new figures!"

"Well, what do you propose to do?" asked Nat Ridgeway. "Where are you going now—back to Magdalena bay?"

"No."

"Where, then?"

Wilbur smote the table with his fist. "Cuba!" he cried. "I've got a crack little schooner out in the bay here, and I've got $100,000 worth of loot aboard of her. I've tried beachcombing for awhile, and now I'll try filibustering. It may be a crazy idea, but it's better than dancing. I'd rather lead an expedition than a german, and you can chew on that, Nathaniel Ridgeway."

Jerry looked at him as he stood there before them in the filthy, reeking blouse and jeans, the ragged boots and the mane of hair and tangled beard, and remembered the Wilbur he used to know, the Wilbur of the carefully creased trousers, the satin scarfs and fancy waistcoats.

"You're a different sort than when you went away, Ross," said Jerry.

"Right you are," answered Wilbur.

"But I will venture a prophecy," continued Jerry, looking keenly at him. "Ross, you are a born and bred city man. It's in the blood of you and the bones of you. I'll give you three years for this new notion of yours to wear itself out. You think just now you're going to spend the rest of your life as an amateur buccaneer. In three years at the outside you'll be using your 'loot,' as you call it, or the interest of it, to pay your taxes and your tailor, your pew rent and your club dues, and you'll be what the biographers call 'a respectable member of the community.'"

"Did you ever kill a man, Jerry?" asked Wilbur. "No? Well, you kill one some day—kill him in a fair give and take fight—and see how it makes you feel and what influence it has on you, and then come back and talk to me."

It was long after midnight. Wilbur rose.

"We'll ring for a boy," said Ridgeway, "and get you a room. I can fix you out with clothes enough in the morning."

Wilbur stared in some surprise and then said:

"Why, I've got the schooner to look after. I can't leave those coolies alone all night."

"You don't mean to say you're going on board at this time in the morning?"

"Of course."

"Why—but—but you'll catch your death of cold!"

Wilbur stared at Ridgeway, then nodded helplessly and, scratching his head, said, half aloud:

"No. What's the use? I can't make 'em understand. Good night. I'll see you in the morning."

"We'll all come out and visit you on your yacht." Ridgeway called after him, but Wilbur did not hear.

In answer to Wilbur's whistle Jim came in with the dory and took him off to the schooner. Moran met him as he came over the side.

"I took the watch myself tonight and let the boy turn in," she said. "How is it ashore, mate?"

"We've come back to the world of little things, Moran," said Wilbur. "But we'll pull out of here in the morning and get back to the place where things are real."

"And that's a good hearing, mate."

"Let's get up here on the quarter deck," added Wilbur. "I've something to propose to you."

Moran laid an arm across his shoulder, and the two walked aft. For half an hour Wilbur talked to her earnestly about his new idea of filibustering, and as he told her of the war he warmed to the subject, his face glowing, his eyes sparkling. Suddenly, however, he broke off.

"But, no!" he exclaimed. "You don't understand, Moran. How can you? You're foreign born. It's no affair of yours!"

"Mate, mate!" cried Moran, her hands upon his shoulders. "It's you who don't understand—don't understand me. Don't you know—can't you see? Your people are mine now. I'm happy only in your happiness. You were right—the best happiness is the happiness one shares. And your sorrows belong to me, just as I belong to you, dear. Your enemies are mine, and your quarrels are my quarrels." She drew his head quickly toward her and kissed him.

In the morning the two had made up their minds to a certain vague course of action. To get away—anywhere—was their one aim. Moran was by nature a creature unfit for civilization, and the love of adventure and the desire for action had suddenly leaped to life in Wilbur's blood and was not to be resisted. They would get up to San Francisco, dispose of their "loot," outfit the Bertha Millner as a filibuster and put to sea again. They had discussed the advisability of rounding the Horn in so small a ship as the Bertha Millner, but Moran had settled that at once.

"I've got to know her pretty well," she told Wilbur. "She's sound as a nut. Only let's get away from this place."

But toward 10 o'clock on the morning after their arrival off Coronado, and just as they were preparing to get under way, Hoang touched Wilbur's elbow.

"Seeum lil one piece smoke boat. Him come chop-chop."

In fact, a little steam launch was rapidly approaching the schooner. In another instant she was alongside. Jerry, Nat Ridgeway, Josie Herrick and an elderly woman, whom Wilbur barely knew as Miss Herrick's married sister, were aboard.

"We've come off to see your yacht!" cried Miss Herrick to Wilbur as the launch bumped along the schooner's counter. "Can we come aboard?" She looked very pretty in her crisp pink shirt waist, her white duck skirt and white kid shoes, her sailor hat tilted at a barely perceptible angle. The men were in white flannels and smart yachting suits. "Can we come aboard?"

Wilbur gasped and stared. "Confound it!" he muttered. "Oh, come along," he added desperately.

The party came over the side.

"Oh, my," said Miss Herrick blankly, stopping short.

The decks, masts and rails of the schooner were shiny with a black coating of dirt and grease; the sails were gray with grime; a strangling odor of oil and tar, of cooking and of opium, of Chinese punk and drying fish, pervaded all the air. In the waist, Hoang and Jim, bare to the belt, their cues looped around their necks to be out of the way, were stowing the dory and exchanging high pitched monosyllables. Miss Herrick's sister had not come aboard. The three visitors—Jerry, Ridgeway and Josie—stood nervously huddled together, their elbows close in, as if to avoid contact with the prevailing filth, their immaculate white outing clothes de[illegible] themselves violently against the squalor and sordid grime of the schooner's background.

"Oh, my!" repeated Miss Herrick in dismay, half closing her eyes. "To think of what you must have been through! I thought you had some kind of a yacht. I had no idea it would be like this." And as she spoke Moran came suddenly upon the group from behind the foresail and paused in abrupt surprise, her thumbs in her belt.

"I'm very pleased to meet Miss Sternersen."

She still wore men's clothes and was booted to the knee. The heavy blue woolen shirt was open at the throat, the sleeves rolled halfway up her large white arms. In her belt she carried her haftless Scandinavian dirk. She was hatless as ever, and her heavy, fragrant cables of rye hued hair fell over her shoulders and breast to far below her belt.

Miss Herrick started sharply, and Moran turned an inquiring glance upon Wilbur. Wilbur took his resolution in both hands.

"Miss Herrick," he said, "this is Moran—Moran Sternersen."

Moran took a step forward, holding out her hand. Josie, all bewildered, put her tight gloved fingers into the calloused palm, looking up nervously into Moran's face.

"I'm sure," she said feebly, almost breathlessly—"I—I'm sure I'm very pleased to meet Miss Sternersen."

It was long before the picture left Wilbur's imagination. Josie Herrick, petite, gowned in white, crisp from her maid's grooming, and Moran, sea rover and daughter of a hundred vikings, towering above her, booted and belted, gravely clasping Josie's hand in her own huge fist.

CHAPTER XIII.

SAN FRANCISCO once more! For two days the Bertha Millner had been beating up the coast, fighting her way against northerly winds, butting into head seas.

The warmth, the stillness, the placid, drowsing quiet of Magdalena bay, steaming under the golden eye of a tropic heaven, the white, baked beach, the bay heads, straited with the mirage in the morning, the coruscating sunset, the enchanted mystery of the purple night, with its sheen of stars and riding moon, were now replaced by the hale and vigorous snorting of the trades, the roll of breakers to landward and the unremitting gallop of the unnumbered multitudes of gray green seas careering silently past the schooner, their crests occasionally hissing into brusque eruptions of white froth or smiting broad on under her counter, showering her decks with a spout of icy spray. It was cold. At times thick fogs cloaked all the world of water. To the east a procession of bleak hills defiled slowly southward. Lighthouses were passed; streamers of smoke on the western horizon marked the passage of steamships, and once they met and passed close by a huge Cape Horner, a great deep sea tramp, all sails set and drawing, rolling slowly and leisurely in seas that made the schooner dance.

At last the Farallones looked over the ocean's edge to the north; then came the whistling buoy, the Seal rocks, the Heads, Point Reyes, the Golden Gate flanked with the old red Presidio, Lime point with its watching cannon, and by noon of a gray and boisterous day, under a lusty wind and a slant of rain, just five months after her departure, the Bertha Millner let go her anchor in San Francisco bay some few hundred yards off the lifeboat station.

In this berth the schooner was still three or four miles from the city and the water front. But Moran detested any nearer approach to civilization, and Wilbur himself was willing to avoid, at least for one day, the publicity which he believed the Bertha's reappearance was sure to attract. He remembered, too, that the little boat carried with her a fortune of $100,000 and decided that until it could be safely landed and stored it was not desirable that its existence should be known along "the front."

For days, weeks even, Wilbur had looked eagerly forward to this return to his home. He had seen himself again in his former haunts, in his club and in the houses along Pacific avenue where he was received, but no sooner had the anchor chain ceased rattling in the Bertha's hawse pipe than a strange revulsion came upon him. The new man that seemed to have so suddenly sprung to life within him, the Wilbur who was the mate of the Bertha Millner, the Wilbur who belonged to Moran, believed that he could see nothing to be desired in city life. For him was the unsteady deck of a schooner, and the great winds and the tremendous wheel of the ocean's rim, and the horizon that ever fled before his following prow; so he told himself, so he believed. What attractions could the city offer him, what amusements, what excitements? He had been flung off the smoothly spinning circumference of well ordered life out into the void.

He had known romance and the spell of the great, simple and primitive emotions; he had sat down to eat with buccaneers; he had seen the fierce, quick leap of unleashed passions and had felt death swoop close at his nape and pass like a swift spurt of cold air. City life, his old life, had no charm for him now. Wilbur honestly believed that he was changed to his heart's core. He thought that, like Moran, he was henceforth to be a sailor of the sea, a rover, and he saw the rest of his existence passed with her aboard their faithful little schooner. They would have the whole round world as their playground; they held the earth and the great seas in fief; there was no one to let or to hinder. They two belonged to each other. Once outside the Heads again and they swept the land of cities and of little things behind them, and they two were left alone once more, alone in the great world of romance.

About an hour after her arrival off the station, while Hoang and the hands were furling the jib and foresail and getting the dory over the side, Moran remarked to Wilbur:

"It's good we came in when we did, mate. The glass is going down fast, and the wind's breezing up from the west. We're going to have a blow. The tide will be going out in a little while, and we never could have come in against wind and tide."

"Moran," said Wilbur, "I'm going ashore—into the station here. There's a telephone line there. See the wires? I can't so much as turn my hand over before I have some shore going clothes. What do you suppose they would do to me if I appeared on Kearney street in this outfit? I'll ring up the wholesale chemists in town and have an agent come out here and talk business to us about our ambergris. We've got to pay the men their prize money. Then as soon as we get our own money in hand we can talk about overhauling and outfitting the Bertha."

Moran refused to accompany him ashore and into the lifeboat station. Roofed houses were an object of suspicion to her. Already she had begun to be uneasy at the distant sight of the city of San Francisco, Nob, Telegraph, Russian and Rincon hills, all swarming with buildings and grooved with streets. Even the landlocked harbor fretted her. Wilbur could see she felt imprisoned, confined. When he had pointed out the Palace hotel to her—a vast gray cube in the distance, overtopping the surrounding roofs—she had sworn under her breath.

"And people can live there! Good heavens! Why not rabbit burrows and be done with it? Mate, how soon can we be out to sea again? I hate this place."

Wilbur found the captain of the lifeboat station in the act of sitting down to a dinner of boiled beef and cabbage. He was a strongly built, well looking man, with the air more of a soldier than a sailor. He had already been studying the schooner through his front window and had recognized her and at once asked Wilbur news of Captain Kitchell. Wilbur told him as much of his story as was necessary, but from the captain's talk he gathered that the news of his return had long since been wired from Coronado and that it would be impossible to avoid a nine days' notoriety. The captain of the station (his name was Hodgson) made Wilbur royally welcome, insisted upon his dining with him and himself called up the chemists as soon as the meal was over.

It was he who offered the only plausible solution of the mystery of the lifting and shaking of the schooner and the wrecking of the junk. Though Wilbur was not satisfied with Hodgson's explanation, it was the only one he ever heard.

When he had spoken of the matter, Hodgson had nodded his head. "Sulphur bottoms," he said.

"Sulphur bottoms?"

"Yes; they're a kind of right whale. They get barnacles and a kind of marine lice on their backs and come up and scratch themselves against a ship's keel just like a hog under a fence."

When Wilbur's business was done and he was making ready to return to the schooner, Hodgson remarked suddenly: "Hear you've got a strapping fine girl aboard with you. Where did you fall in with her?" And he winked and grinned.

Difficult Digestion

That is dyspepsia.
It makes life miserable.
Its sufferers eat not because they want to, —but because they must.
They know they are irritable and fretful; but they cannot be otherwise.
They complain of a bad taste in the mouth, a tenderness at the pit of the stomach, an uneasy feeling of puffy fulness, headache, heartburn and what not.
The effectual remedy, proved by permanent cures of thousands of severe cases, is
Hood's Sarsaparilla
HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic.

KODOL
Digests What You Eat.
Weak Hearts
Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mrs. Loring Nichols of Penn Yan, N. Y., writes: After eating, my food would distress me by making my heart palpitate and I would become very weak. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and it gave me immediate relief. After using a few bottles I am cured.
Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders, and gives the heart a full, free and untrammeled action.

THE GREAT EXPOSITION.

Interesting City and Great World's Fair.

SOME HISTORIC POINTS

St. Louis the Gateway to the West—The Old Homes of Grant and Sherman—The Old Slave Mart.

THE INTRAMURAL RAILWAY.

Special correspondence to the Republican.

The Louisiana Purchase Commission surely showed great wisdom in selecting St. Louis as the city in which to hold the World's Fair which commemorates the transfer of Louisana from France to the United States. With its great railway facilities, it is the gateway from the North and East to the West and South. Centrally located, abounding in wealth and beautifully laid out, St. Louis will, before the close of the Fair, convince the world that she is well fitted to occupy the position of hostess of the nation.

Both city and surrounding country abound in objects of interests, many of them dating far back into the ante bellum days. In that part of the city, where in the days of '60 were the homes of the wealthy, but where now boarding houses flourish, stands the home of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman. As one stands in front of the old mansion now used as a boarding house an old and delapidated in appearance, it is hard to imagine that one of our finest Generals often walked the length of the broad piazza or that gay throngs once crowded the spacious, well furnished rooms that now are bare, save such furniture as a boarding-house usually boasts.

Down in the old part of the city near the river, stands the old court house upon the portico of which slaves were once bid off to kind or brutal masters as the case might be. The old house and the terrible scene where a human soul was exchanged for money, has been finely described in Winston Churchills' historical novel, "The Crisis."

Upon a country road, a few miles from the city, there stood, until within the last few months, a log cabin which General U. S. Grant built with his own hands and which was occupied by himself and family in the days before the war when by way of making a living he hauled wood to the people of St. Louis. Not long ago the house was placed within the World's Fair grounds, and for the sum of ten cents for adults and five for children, one may go through the rooms which still contain many relics of the days when Grant was simply a poor man. Some things have been changed, but enough are left to show how at least one of our Presidents rose, by his own efforts from poverty and obscurity to the highest honor the nation could bestow.

The World's Fair grounds cover an area of 1240 acres and are a part of Forest Park, the second largest park in the United States. They are tastefully laid out, with the cascades, which are surely the work of a true artist, as the central feature of the beautiful picture. About the grounds extend two miles of lagoons, upon which, for fifty cents one may ride in the long, narrow gondolas or for twenty-five cents upon the electric launches that make the distance in much less time.

On the outer edge of the grounds runs the Intramural railway, a trolley line that saves one many a long walk in crossing from one part of the grounds to another. The stations are located as near as possible to the buildings of interest, and on a warm day one does not begrudge the price of a ride, which is ten cents, to be transferred so pleasantly to some point of interest when otherwise the distance would have been made on foot.

For those who do not feel equal to walking over the grounds, aided by the Intramural, are automobiles and roller chairs wheeled by guides who explain the objects of interest one passes. These chairs cost sixty cents an hour and by their aid, many an elderly person and even an invalid can enjoy the Fair without the least exertion or inconvenience.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition is by far the greatest World's Work that has ever yet been undertaken. Whether or not it will be surpassed in the years to come, time alone will tell.

District Convention.

The Ministerial, Sunday School and K. L. C. E. convention of Centre district of the United Evangelical church convened at Coburn, May 24-26. The convention was organized by electing Presiding Elder Crumbling, president; N. Young, vice president; C. C. Mizner, secretary and I. N. Blair, treasurer.

A very hearty and enthusiastic welcome was extended to the delegates in well chosen words by the pastor, Rev. I. N. Bair, to which Rev. S. S. Mumey, of Patterson, responded, displaying his usual wit and spice. The convention sermon was preached by the chairman from Isaiah VI-1-8, using the following outline: (1) Preparation for service; (2,) The call to service; (3,) The response to the call.

On Wednesday morning a spirited song service, conducted by Rev. D. A. Artman, gave the convention a good start for the day. "Elements of Ministerial success," furnished the topic for a splendid paper prepared and read by Rev. S. Smith, of Rebersburg. The needs of the Sunday school were discussed by Rev. W. C. Bierly, of Spring Mills. The speaker had no difficulty to diagnose the case, but was in a dilemma as to the remedy until Rev. J. F. Shultz supplied the prescription. The above discussion was followed with a very interesting parliament on "The K. L. C. E. at Work," by Rev. D. A. Artman, of Howard. The next topic, "Methods of Temperance Reform," had a very able exponent in the person of Rev. W. B. Cox, of Bellefonte, who impressed the audience with the enormity and audacity of a rum traffic as well as the inconsistency of some of the tactics used by a certain class of reformers. Rev. J. Womeldorf, of Middleburg, came next with a most excellent paper on "Our Associate Members, How to Get Them, and What to Do With Them,"

Rev. S. Aurand, of Millmont, who has been in the ministry for almost 50 years, presented an interesting paper on "Our Church Prayer Meeting," which was followed with a parliament on "How to Prepare and Teach a Sunday School Lesson," conducted by Rev. S. S. Mumey, the heavyweight preacher of the convention. The rain storm prevailing at this time made the house very dark but the speaker stuck to his subject until he had completed his task like a hero.

The evening session was devoted to missionary interests under the following heads: "Conference," discussed by Rev. N. Young, of Lewistown; "Frontier," by Rev. W. N. Fulcomer, of Bellwood, and "China," by Mrs. M. I. Jamison, of Altoona. The above topics were all presented with intelligence, force and enthusiasm.

Thursday morning opened with a spirited pentecostal service, which was followed by the little giant, Rev. N. J. Dubs, of Centreville, presenting a well prepared paper on "The Minister in the Pulpit." Rev. L. Dice, of Mazeppa, came next with a paper showing the "Relation of the Sunday School to the Church," which was followed by the topic, "How to Avoid Superficiality in Revival Work," presented in an able and interesting manner by Rev. C. F. Garrett, of Beavertown.

The afternoon session began with an interesting and spiritual testimony meeting which set a splendid pace for the balance of the program. Rev. E. I. Confer, of Millmont, came next and very fittingly presented the "Importance of Family Worship," to which was added a beautiful climax in the solo, "Tell Mother I'll be There," sung by Rev. Artman.

The next turn of the wheel brought forward Rev. S. E. Koontz, of New Berlin, presenting "Our Conference Benevolence, in a manner evincing great care in preparation. A parliament on the "Model K. L. C. E. Service," was conducted by Rev. C. C. Mizner, of Mifflinburg. He had prepared an outline which, if executed, would indeed result in a model service.

The last session was opened with a unique scripture reading, conducted by D. L. Zerby, of Millheim, which was followed by a masterly and eloquent address on the "Privilege, Duty and Advantage of Church Membership," delivered by Rev. J. F. Shultz, of Centre Hall. The last topic, "The Care of Converts," was presented by Rev. M. I. Jamison, of Altoona.

A question box conducted at the close of nearly every session gave a good deal of spice to the services. The singing during the convention was inspiring and enthusiastic, variety was given to the program by an occasional song from a male quartet.

The final close came in a spiritual consecration service conducted by Rev. I. N. Bair.

All the delegates left highly pleased with the results of the convention and also with the royal entertainment accorded them in the homes of the people of Coburn. The local pastor also deserves great credit for the arrangements and provisions he made to take care of this convention. We will all be ready to go to Coburn again.

Next year the convention goes to Winfield, Union county.

WORLD'S FAIR.

Great Coach Excursions via Pennsylvania Railroad.

June 9, 16, 23 and 30 are the next dates for great coach excursions to St. Louis via Pennsylvania Railroad, on account of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. The rates for these excursions have been fixed at such a low figure that they afford those of limited means an opportunity of seeing the World's Fair at an exceptionally small cost. The unusual success attending the first Pennsylvania railroad excursion indicates that these will be very popular.

Special trains of standard Pennsylvania railroad coaches of the most modern pattern will be run on the above-mentioned dates from New York, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Altoona and Pittsburg, directly through to St. Louis, with ample stops for meals at convenient hours. Each train will be in charge of a tourist agent of the Pennsylvania railroad. The rates will be the same as for the first excursion, May 10, $20 from New York, $18.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

Special information regarding time of special train and connections, and rates from principal stations east of Pittsburg, will be announced shortly.

A Pretty Wedding.

A pretty home wedding took place at the home of County Superintendent C. L. Gramley, of Rebersburg, Wednesday evening June 1st at eight o'clock, when the marriage of his daughter, Miss Alma E., to M. Claude Haines, also of Rebersburg, was solemnized, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Bixler, of the Lutheran church.

The attendants were Miss Orpha Gramley, of Spring Mills, and Lynn Emerick, of Rebersburg, and the flower bearers Florence Heckman, of Clintondale, and Harry Hubler, of Rebersburg. The wedding march was performed by Miss Bessie Dubbs.

The Gramley home, which was beautiful decorated in white and green, became a scene of social activity after the formalities of the wedding ceremony were over. Although the invitations were confined to the immediate friends and relatives of the principals, fully sixty covers were laid to serve the guests, the refreshments not being one of the least features in the affair.

The bride is accomplished and refined and truly womanly. The groom is a school teacher, son of George B. Haines, and is associated with his brother in the butcher business in Rebersburg.

The couple are at home in Rebersburg, having dispensed with the customary honey-moon trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines were most heartily serenaded by the calithumpians, the omission of which act in that town would be regarded as an evil omen.

Wallace Musser Injured.

Wallace Musser, of Penn Hall, was thrown from his wagon and sustained an injury the outcome of which can at present only be conjectured.

Mr. Musser drives one of the several wagons that collects cream for the Spring Mills creamery, and immediately west of Centre Hall, on the Brush Valley road, the horses he was driving took fright at a stone crusher in operation. Before assistance could be given, one of the lines broke which threw the horses against the fence and as a consequence the wagon was upset. Realizing that after the lines had parted he could no longer control the horses, Mr. Musser jumped from the wagon and in doing so he was tripped by the line and thrown to the ground, one of the wheels striking the acromion (the outer extremity of the shoulder blade) and crushing it. A gash was also cut above the eye by the top of the falling wagon.

Mr. Musser was taken to the office of Dr. Allison where the wounds were dressed, and in the afternoon (Memorial Day) he was taken to his home.

After the wagon was upset, the horses became detached, and after running for a short distance were easily captured.

Mr. Musser is reported as improving.

Beautiful Brazilian Woods.

St. Louis June 4 Brazil's exhibit of fine woods in the Palace of Forestry, Fish and Game at the World's Fair is a feature of education and interest. The exhibit occupies a very tastefully arranged rustic inclosure whose pattern might be studied to advantages by builders of summer-houses. Here are displayed a thousand kinds of woods from the great forests of Brazil.

The Brazilian coat-of-arms, made of 102 different woods artistically inlaid, occupies a place of prominence in this exhibit. A chessboard, made of 5640 pieces of wood, is another interesting feature.

Other articles made of inlaid woods, artistically executed, fancy figures of wood and many pieces of the trees of Brazil are shown, and a large case is devoted to an exhibit of medicinal barks, herbs, etc., found in Brazil. Several great glass cases filled with mounted birds of brilliant plumage show another feature of the tropical forests of the greatest South American republic.

Replanting Corn.

The corn crop has largely been replanted. In many instances fields were dragged, and the corn regularly planted, others planted between the rows; while still others followed each row and planted by hand. One of the greatest difficulties the farmers had to contend with was to secure seed corn that was reasonably sure of germinating.

It was anticipated by many careful and observing farmers that the seed corn might have been injured by the extreme cold of last winter, and in view of this much of the corn was tested by planting in pots in the house. It has since developed that much of this corn that was apparently sound—germinated in the house pots—failed to be strong enough to withstand the unfavorable corn weather which followed the early planting.

June corn planting will be thoroughly tested this year.

"The Hand That Rocks The Cradle Rules The World."

MOTHER'S love starts a man or woman on the right path. The right remedy at the right time fits a mother for the ordeal. Motherhood is often looked forward to with feelings of great dread by most women. At such a time when she is nervous, dyspeptic, irritable and in need of a uterine tonic—something which will calm the nervous system through the special organs, and a strength builder, she will find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription just what is needed. Here is a medicine that has stood the test of a third of a century with approval, in that time it has sold more largely than any other remedy put up specially for women's weaknesses. It is guaranteed by the proprietors not to contain a particle of alcohol—which could only do harm to a sensitive system.

WHY WOMEN SHOULD CONFIDE IN A MAN.

It is much easier for a woman to confide in the average man than in the average woman. She knows that the man will respect her confidences and keep them to himself. He is strong, has more experience of the world and can help the woman who needs advice. Without a perfect medical understanding there can be no helpful advise, women should not trust their delicate constitutions in the hands of unskilled persons. It requires a thorough medical education to appreciate and understand the womanly organism. When a woman has ills and pains that she cannot bear—when life seems dark for every woman, she should confide her troubles to a physician of standing in the community, or one who has a national reputation. Certainly it would not be the part of wisdom to confide in an ignorant person without medical education simply because she was a woman. There is every reason why she should write to some great specialist, one who has made the diseases of women a specialty for a third of a century, like Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. All correspondence is held sacredly confidential, and he gives his advice free and without charge.

SINGLE AND MARRIED WOMEN

Very often find that it is repugnant to their feelings to consult their family physician. In such a case they can put perfect confidence in Dr. Pierce, who has made such a success in the treatment of women's diseases, for he will give the very best advice possible and without cost. To grow beautiful, healthy and happy should be the desire of every woman. It is then possible to hold a husband and to make home happy and bring contentment to it. In most cases Dr. R. V. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will fit the needs and put the body in healthy condition.

So sure of it is the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that they offer

A $500 REWARD

For women who cannot be cured of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health, by curing the local womanly diseases which are generally responsible for the failure of the general health. A woman's entire being is centered in her womanly nature. When the delicate womanly organism is attacked by disease; when there is irregularity or a disagreeable drain; when inflammation burns and ulcers gnaw, the general health will reflect the progress of disease, in increasing weakness, nervousness, backache, headache, loss of appetite and sleeplessness.

Frick Not a Candidate.

PITTSBURG, June 2.—Henry C. Frick denied Wednesday that he was a candidate for U. S. senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of M. S. Quay. "I am not a candidate," said he, "and I have never thought of such a thing."

HARRISBURG, June 2.—It was reported here Wednesday night that John P. Elkin, republican candidate for supreme court judge, will become a candidate for United States senator to succeed Mr. Quay on condition that Insurance Commissioner Durham, the republican leader of Philadelphia, will support him. Mr. Durham is now on his way east from California and on his arrival at Philadelphia Mr. Elkin will have a conference with him.

Ex-State Senator William Flinn is the choice of the Allegheny republican organization for the United States senatorship made vacant by the death of M. S. Quay.

Flinn started east on the same train with Senator Penrose and John P. Elkin Tuesday night.

Concerning the senatorial talk Mr. Flinn said: "I have been asked by a great many influential republicans to be a candidate for United States senator. I intend to look the field over in the near future and give the matter serious consideration. It is a highly important position and one that any man would be justified in aspiring to."

So far as Governor Pennypacker is concerned there is nothing whatever new in the United States senatorial question, and it was said at the executive department Wednesday morning that the governor had not for a single moment considered the matter; that he has ignored all attempts to draw him into a declaration on the subject, and declined to talk of it to anybody. It might be suspected that the governor had at least commenced to look up authorities on the subject of appointing a successor, but it is said on the highest authority that he has done nothing of the kind.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Democracy was here in force on Tuesday and what a gathering it was. The Bower, Meek and Kurtz elements seemed to be eliminated, the country leaders were side-tracked, while Spangler of Bellefonte and White of Philipsburg, with Squire Keichline as an able assistant, ruled the roost.

The roll-call and the usual forms of organization were put through in record time, with Colonel "Jack" in the chair to see that no slip should be made. They forgot to provide for Committees on Credentials and Resolutions so the worthy Colonel appointed the committee off hand and gave "Doc." White the resolutions with instructions not to waste time. The committee retired until Orvis had been nominated for Judge and then appeared as though by clockwork. Their chairman, who had evidently been up all night working for his legislative candidate, read their report in a scarcely audible voice and looking as though the whole thing was a painful duty.

In the meantime, to the surprise of the delegates, J. Calvin Meyer had been roped in to nominate Orvis for Judge, and although his address was an excellent one from a Democratic standpoint, yet his dearest hopes had been ended by that very nomination and his face showed the bitterness of defeat.

The nomination of candidates for Assembly was next in order and the Philipsburg delegates who had centered their entire efforts upon Swires were sent home empty handed. Swires, with 38 instructed delegates from the start, only received two additional votes in the balloting. None of the candidates had obtained a majority of instructions at the primaries and much wire pulling had been necessary to give Kepler the required number to nominate on the first ballot. Kepler 81, Noll 55 and Swires 40 was the result of the first count and the bosses, not being strong on addition and subtraction, failed to see that Kepler's vote deducted from the whole number of votes cast, 176, left Noll with over half the remainder, and ordered a second ballot which of course resulted in his nomination. It might be well to revise the rules of the Democratic party of Centre County and include primary arithmetic in the course.

It may have been comical to see the officials struggle over elementary arithmetic but "Dispenser of Justice" Keichline was the whole show when it came to speech-making. Encouraged and applauded by the chairman on his first attempt, he broke out afresh after each nomination and was decidedly the funny man of the Democratic circus.

It will be interesting to learn how the Democratic voters of the three-fourths of the county north of Nittany mountains and outside of Bellefonte regard the ticket so nominated. Penns Valley has Kepler of Ferguson and Kimport of Harris as its share of the candidates and Bellefonte with Orvis, Noll, Runkle, and Wetzel fills the rest of the ticket. If the Democratic leaders have given up all hope of success in the Fall campaign they have chosen the proper ticket to sink gracefully to defeat. It is rumored that the rest of the candidates are mere trading stock for the judicial candidate, like Keichline's speeches this may also be a joke. However, this ticket and the means by which it was selected has furnished our party with plenty of amunition to insure a Republican victory in Centre County this year.

Things have come to a pretty pass when the highest recommendation a man has to a seat on the bench is that "he is the son of his father." Ye Gods and little fishes.

Philipsburg Democrats feel that they were poorly treated at the recent Democratic County Convention and well they may, for they received scant courtesy at the hands of the Bellefonte ring of Democratic leaders.

How do the Democratic masses like supporting a candidate for Judge who bolted the ticket in 1896 and 1900. Don't it seem like gall for Mr. Orvis to ask their support in return for his past treachery to their ticket.

John G. Love was an able and brilliant practitioner at the Bar of Centre County when his opponent Ellis L. Orvis was in swaddling clothes. He ranks head and shoulders above Mr. Orvis in legal ability. This fact is beyond question.

John F. Keichline proved to be "Johnie on the Spot" at the recent Democratic County convention and with Col. Jack shared the honors of that lukewarm affair. When one was not spouting the other was sure to be and the boquets they threw at each other would have made a backwoods school boy blush; but not so these Democratic "Beacon Lights." Col. Spangler must be grooming "Johnie on the Spot" for a seat on the Supreme bench at some future date.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June, 7, 1904.

As the time approaches for the assembling of the great nominating conventions, the political situation becomes more interesting, and some unexpected changes are noticed. The Cabinet Ministers who have been West and East are returning and reporting at the White House. They bring good news and are satisfied with the situation. Secretary Hitchcock is back from St. Louis; and Secretary Cortelyou has returned from a tour of inspection in and around New York. The question of who should be on the Republican ticket for Vice President will be left for the Chicago convention to determine. A Representative from Indiana, who called at the White House yesterday, informed the President that while Senator Fairbanks will not strive for the nomination, he will not decline it if it comes to him as the voluntary wish of the party. Congressman Hepburn of Iowa, also saw the President yesterday. He says that Speaker Cannon under no circumstances will consent to become Vice President. Little is now said regarding Mr. Hitt for that

Sir Chentung Liong Cheng, the Chinese Minister, has been in New York for a few days with Prince Pu Lun. He was received with great ceremony by the New York Stock Exchange, and in a speech by its President he was assured that if the United States insists upon an open door in China, the Chinese have just as good a right to insist upon an open door in America, with the same treatment for the Subjects of that Empire as we require for Americans in China. News comes from Atlantic City, that Chaochu Wu, the son of the former Minister from China, took the first prize on graduation day in the high school at that place. He speaks English perfectly and is studying French German and Latin. He will pursue his studies at the University of Pennsylvania. The boy was educated in the public schools of Washington and has many admirers in this city.

As Republicans look at the Democratic situation it appears to be full of complications and possibilities. Thus far Judge Parker has 194 delegates; 220 are instructed; Hearst has 90; while the states of Mass., Wis., Md., and Nebraska have favorite sons. The Democratic State platforms run through the whole scale, from the platitudes of the New York, to the radical statements of Nebraska and Maryland. One Represents the silent Parker, the other the open-mouthed Gorman and Bryan. The question is whether to put a conservative man on a radical platform, or vice versa. We give it up,

Handsome, wealthy, and young Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, who was often seen in the company of Miss Alice Roosevelt when Congress was in session in this city, is happily in St. Louis at the same time of Miss Roosevelt's visit. He told the women of the Exposition city that "it is a singular thing that it is your sex and not mine that showed such an interest in Miss Roosevelt. I am sure she dislikes it very much." Of course Mr. Longworth ought to know. To escape the snap shot fiend while in that city, Miss Roosevelt wore a heavy veil completely covering her face. Even then she was "taken," veil and all, and her picture appeared on the first page of one of the principal newspapers.

It is known that Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow has been engaged for some time in the formidable task of reorganizing the rural free delivery in order to be ready for the new arrangements provided by law which go into operation on the first of July. The number of divisions is to be reduced from eight to six; rural agents are to be employed; and the new schedule of salaries will take effect. The Department will not be able to do as much for the clerks as it intended, since for the coming fiscal year the amount appropriated for the increase of salaries is but half a million of dollars while for the current year the amount was one million and two hundred thousand dollars. Of clerks employed in the postal service who receive more than $1,400 a year, of whom there are more than 600, only 58 can be promoted. Of those who receive less than $1,400 only about 30 per cent of those who have been recommended for promotion will be made happy. And yet, the Democrats, in their state platforms, love to harp upon the extravagance of the Republicans in voting away the public money.

Teaching Temperance in the Schools.

When the Woman's Christian Temperance Union first proposed the systematic teaching in the public schools of the effects of tobacco and liquor the step was universally opposed by almost all technical and professional educators.

Not one of them was ready to accept it, and most of those in charge of our schools objected both to this specific teaching and to its compulsory incorporation in elementary text books on physiology. "The Press" itself was among the newspapers which pointed out the apparent dangers of the plan proposed.

Experience has converted all who could be converted. There is no disinterested person who has watched during the past twenty years the steady growth of public sentiment against the use of liquor and tobacco who has not been convicted that the right course was taken in introducing teaching on these subjects into elementary school work. Such an experiment takes time. For eight or ten years after this teaching began it had no apparent effect. Nothing is more noticeable in the the last decade than the decrease in drinking. High license has come in. Legislation has done much. But these are only outer signs of a change of habit. As every observant man knows, there is far less drinking in American life than there was ten, twenty or thirty years ago. There is less drinking in business, less in politics, less at public dinners, less in social life and less treating. "Soft drinks" have multiplied. Their use has increased.

In every great city there are trolley parks and public resorts, such as encircle Philadelphia, where a vast concourse of people meets with all spirituous liquors wholly excluded. This would have been impossible twenty years ago.

These changes are a great national advance. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has a right jealously to defend this teaching, after these wide, visible marks of its success. The result of this experiment must encourage every one in the conviction that moral teaching should be made the basis of more systematic instruction in our elementary schools.

Everybody believes in the Second Table of the Decalogue, the fifth to the tenth commandments. No question of religion is involved in teaching children to honor their parents, to avoid violence, to preserve purity, to respect truth and to covet nothing. It ought to be possible to teach these primary morals in the schools, and we believe it would be possible if bodies like the Woman's Christian Temperance Union took the matter in hand.

The State cannot begin this work. If a suitable manual, or, better still, a series of exercises, like a ritual, appealing to children, similar to that which is now used in the "salute of the flag"—taking not more than ten minutes—were drawn up, summing up these moral duties, it would, if repeated day by day, gradually color the national life.

This country is great and prosperous, but the business of being good has not as yet received all the attention which it deserves.—Philadelphia Press.

Co. B. is Going to Pittsburg.

Friday morning Captain Hugh S. Taylor received orders from Regimental Headquarters at Lewistown saying that Company B. 5th Regment N. G. P. would participate in the unveiling of the General Hawkins monument at Pittsburg June 11th.

They will leave Bellefonte on Friday afternoon June 10th on the 4:44 train and will remain in Pittsburg until Sunday evening. He worked at the carpenter trade for a while and later became a clerk in a mercantile establishment in this place at which he was engaged for several years. He was also in the mercantile business with John B. Awl. Subsequently he was bookkeeper for the Washington Iron Co. He also was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Milesburg and West Union, Iowa, until 1863 when he located at Julian, Pa., becoming railroad station agent and conducting a general store in partnership with T. E. Greist, which connection continued for two years. He then purchased his partner's interest at the same time giving up the station and has since successfully conducted the store alone.

On February 8, 1859, Mr. Irwin was united in marriage with Eliza G. Underwood and nine children blessed their union, three of whom are dead. The surviving children are: William U., a prominent physician of Unionville; Edwin P. and Louis C., well known merchants of this place; Mrs. J. Howard Turner, of Julian; Charles A., and Alfred T., also of Bellefonte.

Politically Mr. Irwin affiliated with the Democratic party and for three years he served as postmaster at Julian, while for six years he was a member of the school board. In religious belief he was an ardent Presbyterian and a faithful member of that church. He was for many years a member of I. O. O. F.

When in health he was energetic and progressive and supported every worthy enterprise for the good of the community. He had the confidence and regard of all with whom he came in contact and his death will be sincerely mourned.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house. Rev. Bergen, of Petersburg, officiating. Interment in the Unionville cemetery.

ACADEMY DEFEATED.

They Lost on Home Grounds to Bell Wood Saturday.

After winning three very creditable victories in succession at Huntingdon, Bellwood and Snow Shoe, the Academy lost on her own grounds, on Saturday, to Bellwood by the close score of 4-2. The game was played in professional style and was one of the most interesting games played in Bellefonte this season.

The visitors brought with them a new left handed pitcher, McMurtrie by name who pitched a slow puzzling ball that completely fooled the Academy hitters. His support in the field was perfect. The Academy boys played a fine game but their inability to hit safely, when hits were needed, brought about their defeat. The visitors scored first, the Academy soon tied the score; and at the beginning of the ninth inning both sides had two runs to their credit. In this inning Bellwood scored two more runs through an unfortunate error of the Academy and a neat two base hit, thereby winning the game as the Academy team failed to score in their half of the ninth.

While disappointed over their defeat the boys on the hill don't begrude Bellwood a victory, for they regard the visitors as the most sportsmanlike and gentlemanly set of athletes they have met in many a day. They will always be welcome in Bellefonte The score:

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents.

There was a surprise party on June 1st given in honor of Mr. Henry Shultz it being his 54 anniversary. His wife took him to see a sick lady and when he came back low and behold the house was crowded to it utmost capacity, to say he was surprised is speaking lightly. At about the midnight hour they all sat down to a sumptnous repast prepared by his good wife. The table groaned beneath the weight of good things to eat and it was remarkable how they vanished from sight. There was 52 persons present but the writer failed to get the names. At a late hour they all departed for their several homes wishing that Mr. Shultz may live to see more such happy and joyous events.

He inquired anxiously if it was true that "Coxey" had been out with his rod lately adding that it would be waste of time for anybody else to go if Rav was allowed to make a raid on the fish first.

Mr. Blair Yarnell made a business trip to Bellefonte Monday.

Our old friend Davy Stewart came out on the "Limited" Monday morning. After an hour or so spent in shaking hands he drove out to the old homestead.

T. B. Budinger, a prominent citizen, enterprising merchant, successful coal operator, and energetic vender of steamship tickets of Snow Shoe, is of late, it seems, reveling very extensively in things western. Not content, apparently, with basking luxuriously in the warm sunshine of California and scaling the lofty peaks and boldly penetrating into the deepest recesses of the awe-inspiring canyons of Colorado for eight or ten weeks, he is going to introduce western produce (more particularly the western Mellon) in the east. A sample Mellow arrived here Monday morning. In exterior appearance it is vastly different from our home product, being quite small and somewhat bristly. Although it appears excessively green, yet it is said that it really is a very fair specimen of the ones raised out west. The chief advantage claimed for this foreign product over the home-grown variety is its remarkable pliability which makes it an easy matter for the one who has it in charge to direct its advancement along whatever lines they may see fit, and no matter how many times it may be shifted around or set aside it is never effected in the least. Although its excess "specie" (a new botanical term) may be frequently blown off, yet it very seldom gets "broke."

According to the well-established and oft-proven signs it may be positively proclaimed that any readers of the Bellefonte Republican who is so fortunate as to be living in Snow Shoe ten years hence will enjoy the following changed conditions:

First, as many people already can foresee as inevitable, "The Republican" headquarters will be at Snow Shoe. Mr. L. L. Holmes, who is generally acknowledged to be a rising young journalist, will be associate editor with W. A. Sickel as manager of the Subscription Dept. and H. W. Fans as regular collector.

We find J. B. Yarnell at the head of a remarkably efficient telephone service and having an exceedingly competent working force under him. The operators are especially intelligent, inasmuch as when you call for anybody it is only necessary to repeat the name or number of the party six or seven times before she understands perfectly who you want.

Boardwalks will be a familiar sight.

Lubricating oil may be purchased at a very low figure and Budinger's windmill will perform its customary revolutions in a quiet and windmill like manner.

Martin J. Leisenring will be a respectable married man and Justice of the Peace at Grass Flat.

W. Samuel Budinger will be demonstrating to little 5 year old Sammy Junior, some of the truths he learned when he went to the Philippines—how first-rate soldiers can be made out of most any kind of raw material and green stuff.

Our friend Crandall, who, long ago having deprived all the streams in this vicinity of their fish has gone even as the great Alexander went, to seek for more worlds to conquer. He is now shortening the lives of the finny tribe in the Polar seas.

Young men who are recklessly inclined and who are so fortunate as to have a lady friend may be seen gliding along the driveways in Rebecca's Park in motor cars of the latest and most stylish pattern. They have all hired them from Confer, proprietor of the twentieth century automobile emporium. It can be readily seen that it is to the advantage of one having automobiles to hire to also be in the undertaking business.

As would naturally be expected, many of the cables that held spirits we were familiar with, to the land of mortality, have been severed during these ten years and the spirits wafted to a more friendly (we hope) port.

Old Rover, better known as "Old Stumpy" has gone to join the band of immortal heroes who have preceded him. Peace be to his ashes!

SPRING MILLS.

A thunder storm passed over our village on Saturday evening last of unusual energy. The thunder and lightning was incessant and of a startling character. The winds approached a hurricane wrecking fences and trees in all directions. A gigantic tree just above the new iron State bridge over Sinking creek, was blown down, and in falling came within an ace of demolishing that costly structure. The rain descended in torrents similar to a cloud burst, the wheat fields were leveled off as if done with a roller, gardens washed out and cellars inundated. The damage in this neighborhood is very considerable. The lightning struck in several places but did no particular damage.

J. Condo has rented his black smith shop, which has been vacant since his appointment as turnkey, to a Mr. Garman, of Osceola Mills. Mr. Garman is reported as being an expert blacksmith.

Andrew Corman has had put down a cement walk from the porch of his residence to the front gate, which looks like huge blocks of stone, Daniel Schlegel, the master workman had charge of the work. He first had the walk dug out two feet deep, and filled it up with concrete and then applied the cement, marking it out into four large blocks. It is certainly a very attractive and substantial footway. Mr. Schlegel says it is frost proof and more durable than half the stone now used for the same purpose.

Geo. W. Dunkle and wife, of Elmira, formerly of this place, are here visiting relatives and friends. They will remain for several weeks.

Wallace Musser who received very serious injuries last week, breaking his arm at the shoulder and otherwise injured, by his horses running off is improving. Mr. Musser was dragged along the road a considerable distance, after one of his lines broke he jumped from the wagon, but became tangled in the remaining line and was unable to extricate himself. It was a close call.

Some parties held their potatoes most too long. Last week they might have sold them for $100 and $1.10. Today they are worth 75 cents next week possibly a half a dollar or less

DEATH OF MITTIE E. AIKEY.

Passed Away on Tuesday Evening.

On Tuesday evening as the sun was sinking to rest in the far west the spirit life of Miss Mittie E. Aikey took its flight into the realms of glory. For several years she has been a most patient sufferer from that dreadful northern disease consumption and when the summons came for her to go home, she was waiting anxiously for the time when she would be at rest.

For the past year Miss Aikey has been making her home with her aunt Mrs. Fannie Shultz on Howard street, and it is needless to say that every comfort possible was given her by her aunt who looked after her during her illness as would a mother. She was a young lady of the highest type, kind with sweet disposition and was a sincere christian girl, and a member of the United Brethren church.

Mittie Ellen Aikey was born in Spring Township and was 19 years old last October.

She leaves to mourn her death many loving friends, her father Theadore Aikey two brothers and a sister, Harry and Edward of Bellefonte and Minnie E. of Roland.

The funeral will occur this Thursday morning at ten o'clock. Services will be held at the home of her aunt on Howard street conducted by Rev. A. Davidson. Interment at Roland.

BIG CLOUDBURST IN LYCOMING VALLEY

Buildings Taken Away and Farms Ruined by Sudden Rise of Water.

An enormous loss of crops and farms is reported for 25 miles along the Lycoming valley from Ralston to Williamsport. Whole farms and houses are reported to have been carried away, and land marks blotted out. Lycoming creek is a raging torrent. Scores of families awoke from their sleep to find themselves carried away by the flood. An entire block of houses was carried from their foundations and landed in the middle of the street. Entire farms along the creek were swept clean of everything. Hundreds of sheep, cattle and pigs were swept down the stream and drowned. The storm causing all this damage was in the nature of a cloudburst.

Narrow Chests.

The old theory that consumption was inherited is utterly discredited by modern medical science. The germs of consumption must be received from without. These germs are every where. They are constantly being received and cast out by the healthy system. It is the narrow chested whose inheritance is weakness who fall a prey to consumption because they are too weak of lung to resist and throw off disease.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes weak lungs strong. It cures obstinate deep-seated coughs, bleeding lungs, weakness, emaciation and other conditions which if neglected or unskilfully treated find a fatal termination in consumption.

$3,000 FORFEIT will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial below, and also of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"In the spring of 1900 I was taken with hemorrhage of the lungs, and became very weak and short of breath, lost flesh and had no appetite," writes Mr. E. L. Pobinett, of Xerxes, Tenn. "I was persuaded to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The first few bottles seemed to do me but little good. Thought I would soon be a victim of that dreaded disease, consumption. Had almost given up in despair when my friends persuaded me to give your 'Golden Medical Discovery' a fair trial. I commenced its use. I weigh 160 pounds now, and when I commenced I only weighed 140 pounds. If any one doubts this statement I will be pleased to answer any inquiry."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." Nothing is "just as good." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from impurities.

CAMPING OUT.

The Camp Near Home. How to Make a Camp Comfortable. The Outfit for Camp Housekeeping.

BY CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK,

Author of "Cradle and Nursery," "First Aid to the Young Housekeepers," "Housekeeping Made Easy," "What to Eat," "In City Tents,

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Herrick.)

The fresh air fashion has ceased to be a fad. Everywhere people are learning the value of a life in the open air and are proving for themselves what even a few weeks of roughing out of doors will do. The complete change of habit aids the fresh air to get in its good work and it is not necessary for the tired toiler to take a long and costly trip in order to make a total variety in the habits of daily life. Farmers' wives have found out that there is benefit to be derived from leaving home for a few days and camping down at some place a few miles from the farm. Busy city workers who cannot afford to take themselves and their families to distant rural spots have discovered that a tent or a cabin within a short ride of town, near enough for the business men to go back and forth to work on their wheels, is not to be despised as a means of getting the change that every one should have in the course of the year.

Perhaps men have more of the native wood dweller in their composition than women, but they never seem to have much difficulty in adapting themselves to the lack of home conveniences and comforts during a camping out period. Possibly this is because they have less of the work of the purveying to do. Children, too, enjoy this sort of life and are never happier than when enduring some small privation that makes them feel that they are leading a truly wild existence.

The average woman does not take quite so kindly to the unconventional camp life, —for obvious reasons. She is usually more a creature of habits then the man and she takes her pleasure in an orthodox fashion. Yet it is a good thing for her to be shaken out of her accustomed round once in a while and even if she does not become so enthusiastic over camping out as do her children and husband she can hardly fail to get real benefit from it.

There are many ways in which the camp may be made comfortable for the seekers for health and change who cannot indulge themselves in the luxuries of those Adirondack campers who supply their rustic dwellings with brass beds and porcelain tubs. That sort of thing is not camping at all, in the real sense of the word, much as it may appeal to the lovers of the fresh pots. The day has gone by when a camp must of necessity be a tent. A tent has its advantages, but it also possesses draw-backs. In hot weather it is very hot, even although it cools quickly at night. In wet weather it is not always water proof, and is chilly. Men and boys are usually satisfied with it, but a woman owns to a preference for some kind of a shanty or shack when she goes camping. Whether it be under canvas or beneath a more substantial roof, the main thing to make sure of in planning for a camp is that the beds shall be comfortable.

Happily a fair bed is easily achieved. A camp cot,—two lengths of wood with a breadth of canvas between and folding legs, beneath,—makes a bed not to be despised, especially when a rug or quilt or comfortable is laid upon it. Such a bed as this can be shifted from place to place, but the same result may be achieved with less bother of transportation by driving into the ground four posts, corresponding with the four corners of the bed, fastening strips from one of these to the other so as to form a hollow square and to these strips securing stout canvas. If one is within reach of evergreens in abundance, cross strips of wood may be fastened to the length-wise strips of the bed frame and boughs of spruce or balsam or hemlock arranged on these for a mattress. The old style of making a bed of boughs on the ground left much to be desired. In wet weather, even with a ditch cut around the tent, some dampness was sure to make itself felt. Likewise crawling things found it very easy to get into the green mattress.

The coverings for such a bed should be dark blankets,—blankets are warmer and lighter than comfortables,—and there should be enough of them. Cold nights are not unknown even in Summer and if one lies awake and shivers during the dark hours there is not much good won from the camping out experiment. Let no woman be deluded into believing she can be really comfortable sleeping on a rubber pillow. This may do for a foundation, but for genuine comfort she will need a pillow of feathers or down.

When a man camper wishes to wash he takes a plunge in the nearest body of water. A woman must plead for a wash basin. If she can afford herself the luxury of a rubber tub she is in great luck. Some sort of a rude wash stand can readily be contrived for her in the corner of her tent or of her cabin and there may be a rope put up or pegs on which she can hang the few clothes she takes with her in camping.

Her wardrobe should be small and sensible. Of course she will wear a short skirt of some woolen stuff, thin flannel shirtwaists, as being easily done up, soft stocks, instead of laundried collars, knickers, rather than elaborate underwear, stout boots and a soft hat. "Frills" of any sort are out of place in a camp,—unless it be one of the luxurious establishments to which I have already referred.

In the regular hunting camps where there are guides, these take charge of the cooking, and the women of the party do not have to trouble themselves with anything in the way of kitchen work. But there are many camps where the women do the housework and there must be provision made for the cooking and eating. The best camp outfit, both for the stove and the table, is of the blue and white enamel iron ware, which is light and durable and not unpleasant to look at. Stone china is ugly as well as heavy and anything finer or more fragile is out of the question.

Table linen, too, is better dispensed with as far as possible. If one cannot be happy without a tablecloth it is well to take a coloured one, but a white oilcloth comes in well as a substitute. Japanese paper napkins are better than damask. Washing and ironing should be spared the campers as much as possible.

The woman who enjoy outdoor sports are very fortunate when they go camping. I do not refer only to the lucky woman who love to fish and row, or who can handle a gun. They may be considered supremely blest. But the advantages of an outdoor fad, already dwelt upon in these columns, are felt especially by the woman who camps out.

Therefore, unless the woman who goes camping has the love of Nature very strongly developed, or is deeply interested in some outdoor fad, she will do well to take with her some means of amusing herself, Let it be her fancy work, or her basket making or her pet game. There should always be books and reading aloud and with these and the needed work of the camp the days should not drag: When the camp is in a place accessible by good roads the bicycle will help to make the outing more delightful.

Attempted to Commit an Outrage.

On Friday evening about 9:30 o'clock Miss Mamie Crouse, adopted daughter of J. Hol. Crouse, of Aaronsburg, was attacked on the public highway by two young men. She was returning from Coburn with her father's horse and produce wagon and when she came to a lonely part of the road leading from Swartz's sawmill to Aaronsburg, two men suddenly appeared alongside of the wagon and ordered her to stop. She did not do so however, when one of the men jumped upon the front wheel, caught hold of her and attempted to pull her out.

Her screams frightened the horse and started it off at a rapid gait the man still holding fast to her. At last his position on the rapidly revolving wheel was too much for the young desperado when he loosened his grasp and jumped off.

From the description given by Miss Crouse the parties have been found and from the confession of one of them, Harry Rider, of Coburn, the attack was made with latent to commit a felonious assault. Information has been lodged against Henry Hoover, otherwise known as "Peacock," as the party who committed the assault.—Millheim Journal.

Poverty of Rural Clergymen.

The poverty of rural clergymen is traditional in this country, but in the earlier days the people among whom they worked were as poor as they. Everybody had land, and if the land was fertile the farmers' families had good and abundant food. The people in the parsonage did not eat poorer food or wear poorer clothes than the people of the congregation. The position of a rural clergyman was one of relative comfort as well as of dignity and honor. But for forty years at least the general level of expenditure has raised, while cash plays a larger part and barter and self-production a smaller one in the country. Yet in many cases the salaries of the country ministers have not been raised, although the money of the ministers of today will not go nearly so far as it would have done forty or fifty years ago.

School Appropriations.

The department of public instruction has compiled the apportionment to the various school districts of the appropriation to the school fund for this year and will on the first Monday of June begin the payment of the funds. To the regular appropriation is added this year the last quarter of the special appropriation of $1,000,000 made by the last legislature to replace that amount deducted from the fund by Governor Stone.

The total amount to be paid this year will be $5,442,552.26 and it has been apportioned according to the returns of taxables, teachers and children between the ages of six and sixteen years in each district.

Centre county will receive for its schools $41,832.47.

"Take care of the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves."

Large things are but an aggregation of small things. If we take care of the small things we are in effect taking care of the large things which the small things combine to make.

Take care of what you eat, when you eat and how you eat, and your stomach will take care of itself. But who takes care of such trivial things? That is why, someday, the majority of people have to take care of the stomach. When that day comes, there is no aid so effective in undoing the results of past carelessness as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It strengthens the stomach, and restores the organs of digestion and nutrition to a condition of healthy activity. It cures biliousness, heartburn, flatulence indigestion, palpitation, dizziness, cold extremities and a score of other ailments which are but the symptoms of disorder in the stomach and its allied organs.

An Ancient Horn Dug Up.

ROME, June 3. A very interesting discovery has been made in the Etruscan necropolis of Traquinia. It consists of a cornet of modern shape, 3,000 years old. Two hundred tombs, containing helments, a breast plate of gold, amulets, vases, etc., have been opened up showing that Etruscan civilization was far superior to that of the Romans. The collection will be offered for sale after the government has appropriated one-fourth of it under the law.

—Judging from the blossoms there will be an abundance of huckleberries this summer. Comparatively speaking, there have been but few mountain brush fires this spring, and indications point to a great season for huckleberry pickers.

THE WEARY WAY.

Daily Becoming Less Wearisome to Many in Bellefonte.

With a back that ached all day
With rest disturbed at night
Annoying urinary disorders
'Tis a weary way indeed
Doan's Kidney Pills drive weariness away
Are endorsed by Bellefonte citizens

G. H. Bradt of 121 Penn street gardener says: "I had a lame back and pain over my kidneys. I was at times so lame it was most painful to straighten up after sitting or stooping and any lifting or turning suddenly hurt me exceedingly. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills, some Bellefonte people who had been cured by using them and I procured a box from F. Potts Green's drug store."

WEATHER FORCAST FOR JUNE.

Extreme High and Low Temperature Predicted by Prophet Foster.

Weather Prophet Foster has fixed up his schedule of storms, temperature changes, etc., for the month of June as follows:

Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent June 2 to 6 warm wave 1 to 5, cool wave 4 to 8. Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about 8, cross west of Rockies by close of 9, great central valleys 10 to 12, eastern states 12. Warm wave will cross west of Rockies about 11, great central valleys 13, eastern states 15.

This disturbance will be initiated by a high temperature wave preceded and followed by very low temperatures. Intensity of weather events will not be so great as in preceding storm which will be at its greatest force near June 6 on meridan 90—earlier west, later east.

Dangerous storms may be expected not far from June 19. Old readers will understand me but new readers are slow to comprehend these short statements. By reference to my weather bulletins the old and careful reader will understand that I expect that disturbance to be one day east of the meridian 90 on June 19. That would place it in the Ohio Valley and on the lower lakes. But it may be a little behind that or a little east of these points. The weather maps will locate the storm center on that or any other day for their hindcasts are good. But wherever that storm center is on June 19th moderately dangerous storms will occur 100 to 300 miles south east of its center as it moves eastward.

After June 7 will come a wave of hot weather. From June 18 to 23 will be another hot period, followed by falling temperatures to close of month.

hair food. It feeds, nourishes. The hair stops falling, grows long and heavy, and all dandruff disappears.

"My hair was coming out terribly. I was almost afraid to comb it. But Ayer's Hair Vigor promptly stopped the falling, and also restored the natural color."

A Romantic Marriage.

A Girard township correspondent informs the Spirit that Mitchell Newcomb of that township, was recently married in a romantic manner. He met his intended who lives at Cincinnati, O., at Tyrone recently, and together they journey to Philadelphia where they were united in the bonds of happy wedlock. Mr. Newcomb then arranged for his bride to remain in the eastern cities until August when she will settle down in her new home. Mr. Newcomb came home to plant his corn and things and get ready for the harvest.—Clearfield Spirit.

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—It will not be long now until the price of strawberries will be down to where a person can afford to make a strawberry short cake a little longer.

—L. E. Jones, of Williamsport, is the newly appointed mail agent on the Lewisburg division of the P. R. R. He will move his family to Bellefonte in the near future.

—Rev. George C. Foley D. D., of Williamsport, will be the specially invited guest at the final meeting of the Literary Club at State College Friday evening and will make the address.

—Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Knisely are rejoicing over the arrival of a bright baby boy at their Penn street home. This makes number six come to share the playthings of five other interesting children.

—The surviving members of the 45th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry will erect a magnificent monument at Vicksburg during the summer. General John I. Curtin is a member of the committee representing the Regiment and Colonel Austin Curtin is one representing the State, both officers are in Philadelphia attending a meeting of the joint committee.

—David S. Kemp died at his home at Lima, Ohio, aged sixty-two years. The deceased was interested in the oil business, and was a son of Philip Kemp, at one time a resident of near Sprucetown. He is survived by two brothers, John Kemp and Miles A. Kemp, of Duke Centre, Pa., and one sister, Anna, wife of C. C. Ramsey, of Pleasant Gap.

—The convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Central Pennsylvania will meet in annual sessionin Trinity church Williamsport on June 14, when it is likely a division of the Diocese will be considered and later on a new Bishop will probably be named. It is thought Bishop Talbot might choose to remain in the eastern district. This convention will help the Parish celebrate the 25th anniversary of their rector Rev. Geo. C. Foley D. D.

—The painting of Col. J. L. Spangler now on exhibition in the store window of F. P. Blair & Co., is one of the finest samples of portrait painting ever shown in Bellefonte. Everyone who knows Col. Spangler pronounces it a perfect likeness and a work of art. It is an oil painting and is the work of the well known Philadelphia firm, Antrim & Landey. On the walls of many of the homes in Bellefonte hang the products of this firm of artists and as the years go by their work will become more valuable and be highly prized by the owners.

—The editor can write more cheerfully of the business interests of the town when his columns are liberally filled with the advertising of the business houses. No editor can advocate the doctrine of buying from home merchants unless the home merchants show they are interested in catering to the home trade by advertising in the columns of the local newspaper. It is depressing to the editor to find business men patronizing every advertising fake that comes along, and the same time the names of these business men are rarely, if ever, seen in the advertising columns of the local newspaper.

—In what is known as the Italian colony on Ninth avenue in Altoona, Sunday afternoon Luigi Duiazze, 21 years old, was stabbed in the left breast by a fellow countryman. The wounded man is at the hospital and is in a serious condition. Duiazze and several other men were sitting in a room at their home when an Italian named Farmaldo suddenly rushed in and plunged the knife into the man's breast. In the excitement that followed Farmaldo escaped. The reason for the assault is said to be that Formaldo was recently suspended from work and Duiazze was put in his place.

—To eliminate the promiscuous appointment of railroad policemen, Governor Pennypacker has prepared a form which will now have to be observed by corporations in applying for the appointment of railroad policemen, In the past the appointment of these officials was entirely devoid of form and all that was required of a corporation was the presentation of a list of names to the governor which he was expected to approve and order that commissions be issued to the men named. Under the new form, in making an application a corporation must show that it is incorporated under the laws of the state and the purpose for which in was incorporated. It must enumerate the circumstances of the case which require the appointment of policemen; give the capabilities of the persons recommended and their reputations for sobriety and peaceableness, and requires that the persons recommended be citizens of the state and their names, residence and length of time they have resided at the places mentioned must be given.

—The Academy defeated Snow Shoe Wednesday at base ball, score 12 to 4.

—John Houser and Margie McMahon were married Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Catholic parsonage at Bellefonte by Rev. P. McArdle.

—The Methodist will hold their Childrens Day services on Sunday morning at at 10:30. The public is cordially invited to attend.

—Frank Davis one of the finest cigamakers in Central Pennsylvania has been employed by H. Otto at his cigar store on Allegheny street.

—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eckenroth, of East High street, are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a baby son at their home a few days ago.

—Mrs. Herman Holtz, who has been in a serious condition for some weeks with nervous prostration, is improving so fast that she is able to out driving every day.

—The citizens of Bellefonte will be glad to hear that the famous Coleville Band will begin their concerts this Thursday evening. The one to be given this week will be in front of the Bush House.

—The Democratic Primaries passed off very quietly Saturday and the following ticket seems to have gone through: President Judge, Ellis L. Orvis, Legislature, John Noll and J. W. Kepler; Prothonotary, Arthur Kimport, District Attorney W. G. Runkle.

—R. A. Beck, the popular tonsorial artist, is the proud father of a sweet little baby girl that arrived at his home early Thursday. Congratulations are pouring in on the happy couple and it is safe to say that nothing is too good for the little Miss Beck.

—May E. Funk, of Patterson, Pa., who was a delegate to the Ministerial, Sunday School and K. L. C. E. convention at Coburn last week, was found dead in her bed at her home on Tuesday morning, May 31. She was buried Thursday afternoon at 2.15 o'clock.

—Elias Zerby, a farmer of Penn township, lost one of his horses very suddenly last Saturday. His brother rode the horse to Spring Mills and tied the animal to a post in front of Major Huss' barber shop. In a few minutes after arriving there the horse laid down and died.

—On Thursday June 16 at 5 p. m. Miss Marion Harding Curtin, daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Wm Wilson Curtin, of Philadelphia, will be married to Mr. James Davis Winsor Jr. The ceremony will take place at "Brentona" the country home of the brides parents at Rosemont, a suburb of Philadelphia. The brides father is a son of the war governor, Andrew G. Curtin.

—On Sunday a jolly crowd composed of Misses Rebecca Heckman, Della Heckman, Jennie Brown, Edna Mallory, Julia Lamb, accompanied by Will Brown as an escort, drove to Spring Mills where they partook of a sumptuous supper prepared by Mr. and Mrs, Robert Smith at their beautiful home at the above mentioned place. They arrived home about midnight.

—The mayor of Altoona has proclaimed his fourth of July edict which shall regulate the capers of the people on the coming national holiday. Children will be permitted to shoot the proper fire works but they must do it in the streets and not in the alleys, to avoid fires. Revolvers will not be tolerated, and dynamite equibe and sulphate of potash caps will have to be shot off out of the city if shot at all.

—Rev. C. M. Tanner, D. D., just from South Africa will lecture in the Court House Friday June 10, 1904. Dr. Tanner is one of the leading men of the South African Conference, Editor of the South African Christian Recorder and Presiding Elder of the Cape Town District of the South African Conference. Dr. Tanner will also exhibit some Native Curios or souvenirs after his lecture. Admission 25 and 15 cents.

—George Downing, of Altoona, strolled on Brush mountain Sunday; but if he did he will carry a mark to his grave in all probability. While descending a steep rockey place his anchor gave way and in the fall that followed his face struck the sharp jagged rock, cutting a great gash in his chin, and an artery which caused him the loss of a great quantity of blood and made him very weak before he reached the hospital, where five stitches mended the rent in his face.—Tyrone Herald.

—William K. Marshall, railroad telegraph operator at Falls Creek and a former Bellefonte boy, had a thrilling experience Wednesday morning. On Tuesday night that town was visited by a gang of robbers who broke into several houses, shot and seriously wounded Capt. W. J. Leahy and when leaving town they fired into the telegraph office where Marshall was doing the night trick. Five or six shots were fired into the room but fortunately none hit Marshall. Among the houses entered was the residence of Rev. Chisholm. The Reverend heard the robbers and fired at them wounding one. The next morning the wounded man was found lying on a board pile near Rev. Chisholm's house where his comrades had left him.

DEATH OF LOUIS AIKEY.

One of Boggs Townships Leading Citizens Passes Away.

Sunday morning at 7:20, the angel of death entered the Aikey home at Snow Shoe Intersection and called away a loving husband and a kind father.

Lewis Aikey has been a patient sufferer for quite a long time, from a complication of diseases his physicians did all in their power to save his life, but were unsuccessful.

He was born in Union county about 61 years ago, but Centre county has always been his home since boyhood days. He was an honest and highly respected citizen of the county and a staunch Republican. He followed the work of a gardner and has been quite successful in raising the finest of vegetables and fruit.

Mr. Aikey was married about 39 years ago to Miss Charity Miles, of Troy, N. Y., who with the following children are left to mourn his death, Mrs. Viola Davidson and Herman Aikey, of Snow Shoe Intersection, Mrs. Wm. Eckerd, of Tyrone and the following brother and sisters: Theodore, Mrs. Fannie Shultz and Mrs. James Gregg, of Bellefonte, and Mrs. Rachael Glenn, of Cleveland, Ohio.

The funeral occurred Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the Advent church. Rev. Zeigler assisted by Rev. Lathrope, of the Baptist church of Milesburg. had charge of the servies.

His Military Record has Been Discovered

Ever since the death of the late Judge John H. Orvis at Bellefonte the historians of Gregg Post have been at their wits end to discover some record of his service during the civil war. While most of the veterans had personal knowledge of the judge's having enlisted in the three month's service and also knew that he rose to the rank of a lieutenant no one could find any record showing him to have been connected with any branch of service.

A few days ago Gen. John I. Curtin was sitting in the office of the Bush house talking to Frank P. Bible. As it was just a short time before Memorial Day the soldier dead naturally came up as a topic of conversation and it was then that General Curtin expressed his regret at being utterly at a loss to understand how Orvis had served in the war and yet left no official record of his service.

This remark recalled a conversation that Mr. Bible had had with judge at least 20 years before, when the latter had said: "Frank, as a soldier, I will pass out unhonored, unmourned and unsung, for they have me on the records as John H. Davis." Mr. Bible had never thought of it until that moment when Gen. Curtin brought the matter up with such little hope of getting a solution of it.

The gentlemen later hunted up Bates' history and there, sure enough, was John H. Davis, 2nd serg., Co. B. 11th Pa. Vols., enlisted from Lock Haven, which was Judge Orvis' home at that time.

It can be seen very readily how the transcribing clerks might have mistaken the first two letters of Orvis for Da. In fact by writing the name rapidly the result will make this very apparent.

The Corner Stone of Old Catholic Church at Lock Haven Cannot be Found.

The officers and members of the Church of the Immaculate Conception at Lock Haven are somewhat perplexed as to what has become of the corner stone of the old building, which has just been razed to make way for the construction of the handsome new edifice. According to the records and by reference to The Democrat's old files, it is learned that the corner stone was laid on Wednesday, August 19, 1857, with appropriate ceremonies, Father Gilligan, who was pastor at that time, officiated, assisted by Father Dunn, of Philadelphia, in the presence of a large assembly of people. It is known also that the usual documents and records were placed in the stone. Despite the diligent search of the workmen who are taking down the old building, neither the stone or any of its contents have been found up to the present time. The search will be continued until every portion of the building is removed, in the hope of securing the papers to place them in the new corner stone.—Lock Haven Democrat.

—Married—Harry Carver and Myrtle E. Lucas of Union Township, Centre County, Pa., were united in holy wedlock at Snow Shoe Intersection by the Rev J. Zeigler, on Thursday May 26, A. D. 1904.

CHURCH RE-DEDICATED.

Interesting Ceremonies Mark Re-Opening of Georges Valley Church.

The re-dedication of the Holy Cross church, George Valley, took place Sunday May 30, the dedicatory act being performed Sunday evening by the pastor, Rev. J. M. Rearick.

The services incident to this occasion began Thursday evening previous, with a sermon by Rev. W. M. Rearick, of West Milton, and Saturday evening Rev. W. E. Fischer, D. D., the former pastor, held services.

Sunday was a delightful day, which gave those interested in this particular service additional spirit. The morning service was largely attended, and it was at this time that Rev. I. H. McGann, of Lewisburg, delivered the dedicatory sermon.

Rev. McGann is an adept in this line of work, and it was with little difficulty that the subscriptions were received from members and others. The work of gathering in the shekels became a pleasure rather than a task, and before the leader was aware the hour for noon had come, before the coins and subscriptions had been summed up, which made it necessary to postpone the dedicatory act until evening.

The afternoon services were devoted to Sunday school work.

In the evening Dr Fischer delivered a sermon on "Why he believed the Bible was the Word of God" This over, the financial side of the question was again taken up, and in a short time the sum total of the subscriptions reached the sum of $1943, as follows:

By subscriptions previous to dedication day	$1109
Collected during morning service	600
Collected during evening service	243
Total	$1948
Total expenditure	1700

The building committee was composed of the following persons:

Samuel Harter	John McCool
Andrew Zettle	John D. Wagner
J. P. Heckman	W. Ripka

The Penns Valley Charge of the Evangelical Lutheran church was organized in 1854, January 30, at Tusseyville. Wedding at Clintondale.

A correspondent sends to us for publication an account of the Swartz-Walker wedding, a brief mention of which was made in these columns last week.

The home of Mr. C. M. Walker, of Clintondale was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Wednesday June 1st, at 5 o'clock when his daughter Mae was united in marriage to Guy E. Swartz, of Bellefonte.

The parlor was tastily decorated with evergreens, palms and flowers. The dining room with rhododendron. The brides table was simple and beautiful with a centre piece of maidenhair fern and pink carnations. Promptly at five o'clock the bridal pair entered the parlor to Lohengrin's wedding march played by the sister of the bride Mrs. John Wolfe, of Jersey Shore.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Price.

Twenty-five guests were present. They will be at home in Bellefonte after June 10th.

—'Tisn't safe to be a day without Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house. Never can tell what moment an accident is going to happen.
